

Dear Prospective Member,

Thank you for your interest in the CSA Standards Participation Program!

This program is your chance to stay on top of the standards development activity that affects your work – and your company's success. Connect with the best minds in the business and help create a better, safer world for us all.

The Participation Program offers an unparalleled opportunity to leverage intelligence and shape outcomes in a range of standards solution areas. Through this program, you gain:

- Access to dozens of standards development technical committees and advisory groups
- The ability and flexibility to participate according to your needs and interests
- The benefit of discounted products and exclusive services

Begin participating today!

1. Complete all sections of the application: Company Information; Participation Categories; Technical Committees and Advisory Groups; Payment Amount; and read the Privacy and Intellectual Property Policy.
2. Arrange for payment. We will not be able to process your application until payment is received.
3. If you are applying as a new participant, please attach a brief biography as requested on page 6 of this application. CSA Standards will use this information solely for the purpose of processing the application for the proposed new TAG member, including the assessment/approval of that person's participation on the requested committee. The information will be kept strictly confidential by CSA Standards and will not be disclosed to any third party except as required by law.

CSA AMERICA PARTICIPATION PROGRAM Privacy and Intellectual Property Policy

Privacy and the Protection of Personal Information

CSA America* is committed to respecting the privacy of its members, participants, customers, and other stakeholders with whom we interact in the development and delivery of products and services that further our goal of making standards work for people and business. Please visit www.csa-america.org/privacy/ to learn more about our privacy policies.

If you are a participant of a group administered by CSA America, such as a committee, advisory council, board or consumer network, or an information subscriber to a technical committee, your contact information is used to conduct the business of that group in the development of standards and related products. Your contact information is normally shared with other participants of your group and possibly the parent committee, to facilitate communications.

CSA America uses an open and transparent process for developing standards, and your involvement in this process may be publicly acknowledged. Depending on your status as a participant of CSA America, your information will also be used in conducting the affairs of the CSA America, such as our Member Awards program, notification of the annual general meeting, election of directors, etc. If you are a participant on a committee that is jointly administered by CSA America and another organization or by CSA America on behalf of another organization, we may share your contact information with that other organization as necessary to conduct the business of the committee.

If you are not a participant of one of the above groups, but are a participant with another organization or group with whom CSA America consults on the development of standards, we will continue to use your contact information for that purpose. Examples include regulatory committees, industry associations and the like.

In addition to the purposes stated above, CSA America may from time to time send you information about other CSA America products and services in which we believe you will have an interest. You may contact us to be removed from this information contact list. CSA America will not disclose your personal information to any other party except if required by law. Please be assured CSA America does not sell or share your contact information with other organizations for commercial purposes [ntd: do we sell or share for non-commercial purposes?].

If you have any questions about your status with CSA America, concerns with how CSA America uses your personal information, or wish to update your information or remove it from our contact lists, please visit our Web site or contact us at participation@csa-america.org.

Protection of Intellectual Property Rights

CSA America honors and respects the intellectual property rights of others, and expects our participants and other stakeholders to likewise respect our intellectual property rights.

You may contribute to the development of a CSA America standard, code or related product through your participation on a CSA America committee, advisory council, board, consumer network or similar group, or as an external stakeholder making proposals for revisions to a draft or published document.

In making these submissions, you are giving CSA America a license (permission) to include any or all of the material you submit into a draft or published CSA America document without further notice. You acknowledge that CSA America will own all worldwide rights in the minutes of meetings and in the documents that it publishes in any media, including the part that you submit, and including drafts that are circulated for review and/or comment.

When you make submissions to CSA America, please remember the rights of others. It is your responsibility to ensure that you have the right to provide CSA America with any material that you submit and that in doing so you are not violating the rights of others including any patents, copyrights, trade secrets or trademarks. If you are unsure of the originating source of any material you are submitting to CSA America, or if you know that another party claims rights in it such as copyright or patent, please notify CSA America immediately.

As a participant on a CSA America committee, advisory council, board, consumer network or similar working group, or as an external stakeholder commenting on a draft or published CSA document, you may receive copies of information in the form of a draft or published document in one or more formats, including electronic or hardcopy. Please remember that CSA America owns copyright in the documents and drafts it produces. You are permitted to use the documents and drafts provided to you for CSA America's standards development purposes only.

You are not permitted to:

- Sell such documents to third parties;
- Load such documents into your organization's electronic systems for general organizational use;
- Transfer or share the material with others except to support CSA America's standards development activities.

You agree that CSA America shall have, and you will do what is requested to grant to CSA America, all and full rights in any copyright in any material that you author, either individually or with others, as a participant in the standards setting process, however that material is published, in whole or in part. If you have any questions about your roles and responsibilities regarding rights to CSA America standards and similar documents, or if you have other needs to copy, reproduce or store all or part of the information, please contact us at participation@csa-america.org.

* CSA Standards in this Participation Program Privacy and Intellectual Property Policy document means CSA America, Inc., as well as Canadian Standards Association (CSA) and all its operating divisions. CSA America, Inc. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Canadian Standards Association.
